WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD

"WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT"

ACCIDENT-PREVENTION REGULATIONS FOR EXPLOSIVE-ACTUATED TOOLS

PURSUANT to the provisions of the "Workmen's Compensation Act," the Workmen's Compensation Board has adopted, after public hearings held at Vancouver, B.C., on November 15th, 1954, and December 9th, 1954, the following accident-prevention regulations concerning the design and use of explosive-actuated tools, effective on and after February 1st, 1955:—

Foreword

It is recognized that rules and regulations cannot completely cover all the hazards associated with the varied uses of any piece of equipment, but they do reveal some of the more obvious dangers and are valuable for the development of prudence and forethought.

Explosive-actuated tools should be handled with the same care and attention as firearms and with due consideration of the dangers associated with the forceful shattering of masonry and similar material, the harmful results of using excessive charges, and the risk of the projectile ricocheting.

1. It shall be the duty of the employer to familiarize himself with and enforce all of the regulations pertaining to explosive-actuated hand-tools that concern and affect him, and to make certain that these regulations are complied with by supervisors and workmen associated with the handling and use of such tools.

2. No person shall operate or be permitted to operate an explosive-actuated tool until he has been thoroughly trained in its use, has demonstrated that he can use the tool effectively and safely under all conditions in which it will be used, is familiar with these rules, and has been instructed and authorized by a competent supervisor to use the tool.

3. All explosive-actuated tools and the explosive charges for same shall be kept, when not in use, in a safe place of storage, and inaccessible to persons not authorized to handle same. The tools and ammunition shall not be left unattended except in a locked case or other safe place of storage.

4. Every explosive-actuated tool used by workmen shall be provided with a manually operated safety device which will prevent the inadvertent firing of the charge by accidental operation of the firing mechanism or by the tool being dropped from any height.

5. The tool shall be so designed that it will not fire if the discharge end of the tool is not in firm contact with the surface being worked, and if there is an inclination of more than fifteen (15) degrees from right angles of the tool to the surface.

6. (a) Every explosive-actuated tool shall be provided with a shield, guard, or other device which will effectively confine flying particles and restrain materials that might ricochet.

(b) Whenever possible the shield or guard shall be used in a central position on the tool, and when shifted for more convenient access to corners or walls, it shall be returned to a central position before being used in places where there is no interference with the guard in the central position.

(c) Protective shields may be retractable for working in recesses or boxes, but shall be so designed that when the barrel is removed from a recess, the shield shall automatically return to its normal operating position.

7. Every explosive-actuated tool shall be maintained in a safe working condition. The operator shall thoroughly inspect the tool each day before using it. Defective or unsafe tools shall be removed from service until satisfactory repairs have been made.

8. Tool operators, helpers, and other workmen in the immediate vicinity shall wear suitable eye-protective devices.

9. Projectiles shall not be discharged so close to corners or edges as to cause the material to break off, or where the guard or shield would not be effective.

10. No person shall fire a projectile into material of unknown resistance to penetration, or into material of such strength or thickness that there is a possibility of the projectile passing through the material, until appropriate action has been taken to ensure that no workman will be exposed to the dangers resulting from a projectile being propelled through the material and into an area where workmen are permitted or required to be present.

11. Explosive-actuated tools shall not be used where flammable or explosive gases, vapours, dusts, or other such substances are present.

12. When explosive-actuated tools are used in confined places, ventilation shall be provided to limit the contamination of the air to a recognized safe concentration.

13. The tool shall not be loaded at any time until inspection has revealed the breech and barrel to be free of any foreign matter. Loading shall be done only to prepare the tool for immediate use, and the tool shall not be left unattended while loaded.

14. If a misfire occurs, the operator shall continue to hold the tool in the firing position for not less than fifteen (15) seconds, and shall, until the cartridge has been ejected, keep the tool pointed in a direction which will not cause injury should an explosion take place.

15. Explosive-actuated tools shall not be used to force a projectile into a working surface of cast iron, glazed brick or tile, terra cotta, marble, granite, slate, glass, any other unusually hard or brittle material, or into a steel surface that is of a greater hardness than the projectile being used. When the hardness of the steel surface is not known, it shall be tested by using a hand-hammer to drive the point of projectile into the steel. If the point of the projectile does not penetrate the surface, no attempt shall be made to use the tool on that surface.

Penalty

Every person who contravenes any of the foregoing regulations shall be liable to a penalty of not more than three hundred dollars.

Any person having knowledge of an explosive-actuated tool being used at any time by any incompetent or unauthorized person, or by anyone for any purpose or in any manner other than that for which the tool was designed and intended to be used, shall forthwith bring the facts and circumstances to the attention of the Board for appropriate action with regard to the person or persons violating the regulations.
